

Our Local Classes Are Designed for You

SeniorNet Learning Centers offer computer classes specifically designed for adults 50 and older. Since 1986 SeniorNet has educated over a million older adults about computers and the Internet to help enrich their lives and enable them to share their wisdom with family and friends.

The SeniorNet Learning Centers offer a low-cost, friendly introduction to using computers. Our basic curriculum is comprised of courses on computer fundamentals, introduction to computers, word processing, exploring Windows, Internet and email.

We also offer more advanced courses that include topics such as genealogy, graphics, digital photography, and financial management. Most Centers offer open lab time where students can use computers to practice their skills or work on individual projects.

Learning Centers are housed in a variety of locations, including senior centers, community centers, public libraries, schools and colleges, and clinics and hospitals. A typical Center contains six to ten computers. Some Centers have as many as 15 to 20 computers. Almost all courses are step by step, "hands-on" courses with one student a computer.
