

Vibrant community engagement endeavor satisfies seniors' passion for learning.

Read the article (in pdf format) in the University of Southern Florida (USF) magazine about the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at USF (OLLI), of which the SeniorNet Learning Center at USF, Tampa, is a part. Ara Rogers, the Director of the program, refers to it as a scholar's "Shangri-la" — a university free from the tensions of traditional academia caused by tests, credits and grades—a haven where students learn for the pure joy and love of learning and instructors share extraordinary knowledge and expertise for free.
